The Westboro Baptist Church is known for its public hate-filled protests against Jews, gays, the military and more. As granddaughters of the church's founder and pastor, Megan and Grace Phelps-Roper were raised on Westboro's vitriolic rhetoric and believed it. One day they gained new perspectives from a Jewish internet blogger, and realized they could no longer support the mission. Hear the story behind their decision to stop picketing, leave the church and their family, and now work to build bridges with communities they once hated and picketed, including Houston. We hope you attend this breakfast program to meet these courageous women and hear their inspiring story.

The Anti-Defamation League (ADL) was founded in 1913 “to stop the defamation of the Jewish people and secure justice and fair treatment to all.” ADL, with 28 offices across the country, is an internationally recognized civil rights/human relations agency and a leader in developing materials, programs and services, building bridges of respect, communication and understanding among diverse groups. ADL's Women's Initiative unites diverse women professionals in ADL's efforts to promote respect and challenge bigotry through dialogue and action.
